The Sandstone Labyrinth & Cairn III

Traversing the Arches of the West Wind to the Benchmark Plate

In the northeastern highlands (Quadrant NE), winds from the west carved deep natural arches into the rock.
Here the raider wagons (The BC Ashes) fractured an axle, leaving deep ruts in the sandstone floor.
Follow the wheel tracks through the stone corridors without entering the dead-end wind caves.
At the terminus of the true trail lies Cairn III with its circular copper benchmark plate.

Wayfinding Ledger of the West Arches:
1. Identify the three medallion arches inscribed with the letters [M] [A] [Z] [E].
2. The true exit bearing from the sandstone arches towards Cairn III is: 042° True North-Northeast.
3. Sighting Ray from Cairn III apex to Sun Monolith: 348° True North-Northwest.
